Course Summary:

After two successful terms of Illustration, this course is designed to take us closer into the world of 'The character'. Over the nine week course we will look at where inspiration can be found in creating our own illustrated characters. We will look at everyday items for inspiration. We will look at ourselves, our features and how we can alter what we know, to create something new. We will begin with pencil drawings and move on to colour, texture and mixed media as our Characters grow and develop.

Eligibility:

Learners must be aged 19 at the start of the course.

How will the course be taught?

"By demonstration, by practical work, with advice and feedback from the tutor, and by working on individual, or occasionally group, projects. The internet may be used as a resource also. Learning logs will be used."

How will I know how well I am doing?

"Progress will be considered in relation to your own 'starting point' and personal goals. You will be encouraged to document your own work and results of any experimental tests. Progress will be reviewed through the course, with opportunities for individual and group appraisal throughout."

Prior Knowledge:

This course is suitable for both the experienced and inexperienced. No previous experience is necessary, although previous experience will determine your individual starting point.
